To play the Two Finger A Cord Mandolin Video, click here by Wayne Erbsen Compared to the guitar, mandolin choirs are easy. In fact, most mandolin choirs only use two fingers or sometimes just one. In the mandolin chorchart charts below, each horizontal line represents some mandolin strings. The E-string is the one closest to the floor as you keep your mandolin in play position, and the G string is closest to the ceiling. The numbers represent the worry. Be sure to place your fingers between, not on, the worry. The letter on the left of each chorchart tells you the name of that chorchart. The letters on the strings tell you the name of the note where you put your fingers. Each chorcard also tells you which fingers to use. An X means you don't play that string. When you make a chorchart, it is essential that you go to the chorchart with both fingers landing on the strings at exactly the same time. In the key of G, for example, you will usually need these three choirs: G, C, D. In the key of D you need D, G and A. And in the key of C, you need C, F and G. Start here and when you teach them to go back and start learning to play the other chorchart sets. Make sure to watch the free videos on this page showing you how to play easy mandolin choirs. Note: An x over a string doesn't mean playing that string. See Cm as an example. It's just a 3-string shape. Of all the choirs shown above the Em can be the hardest if you have great fingers. Some people, who find it to fit the tip of the index and the middle finger in that small space, play it with just the tip of the index finger. You need to turn your wrist a little, move that your fingernail side of your finger is more square up to the worry, but you can find it easier. I also invite you to consider this series of beginner video lessons. Thousands of people have learned to play using these videos because they really work! The two finger mandolin chart contains the Major, Minor and 7th Choirs, plus a fret board chart. Also included are several alternative fingers for D, Em, Gm and G7. I play the two finger choirs most of the time, and what is great about them is that there is easy to find out the various to choose from on the mandolin. The different voices, high and low, are wonderful to get different colors for between the heels and choirs.
